VOL. XXXIII No. 6

Wednesday, 19th September, 1951

Welcome!

IT is with the greatest of possible pleasure that the Directors, Management and Players of the Arsenal Football Club extend tonight a hearty welcome to the Hapoel Football Club from Tel Aviv on the occasion of the first tour match in England of an Israeli football club.

The work of organising this match has been made comparatively simple for Arsenal because of the great interest shown and the help given by His Excellency the Israel Minister and his staff and we are delighted to know that the Minister and Madame Elath will be present to grace the proceedings here tonight.

Acknowledgments too, must be paid to the organisers of the Jewish National Fund and the Wingate Football Club who have done so much to make the whole visit of Hapoel Tel Aviv to England a great success.

We have no illusions about the standard of play of our visitors for we know of their previous good record against British clubs in Israel. The outcome of the match in actual goals is however, of little consequence; what is important is the fostering of good faith and sporting friendship between the football fraternity of the two countries. If tonight's match enhances that by one iota, then both Hapoel Tel Aviv and Arsenal have done a good job of work in arranging this meeting.

Many foreign touring clubs have visited Highbury over the years but none have attracted so much widespread interest in London as Hapoel Tel Aviv. It is a well known thing about touring sides in England that the English football fan does not take kindly to such matches. This cannot be said about the visit of Hapoel Tel Aviv and we can say without doubt that this match has created more active interest than any foreign visiting club team in modern times.

We wish every member of the Hapoel Tel Aviv party a happy time during their stay in England and hope that the game here tonight will prove to be a well-fought sporting contest worthy of the support it has been given by London's football public.

ברוכים הבאים!

Voice of Arsenal

NO matter how one views it, the light of experience shines brightly on the question of football tours of England by foreign teams and that light is not, on the whole, an encouraging one from the point of view of popularity and public support.

Why this should be is a complete mystery to most English football officials especially those who have travelled overseas themselves with their own teams and have experienced the excitement and overwhelming hospitality extended to English teams abroad, not to mention the large crowds which usually assemble for such matches.

It comes therefore, as second nature, for English clubs to be chary when the suggestion is put to them to entertain a foreign team, on tour in England. For we like to be fair to our visitors and refrain from "gilding the lily" as far as the likely financial support is concerned.

These conditions did not prevail however, in the case of Hapoel Tel Aviv F.C. Their glamour has caught the imagination of the London public and this undoubtedly, is not a little due to their record against British clubs in Israel. Another factor is that they represent football from a new state—something new; something untried. That they play good football is evident from their record and it seems that London wants to see it.

Possibly the added attraction of the match being played in floodlight has made some difference and there is little doubt at all that the support of the London Jewish associations has been responsible for an overwhelming application for bookable seats tonight.

That there is every evidence of there being a large gathering to witness the match is particularly pleasing to us because we feel that even apart from the financial side of things (and that is important enough for a team travelling all the way from Israel) it must give a great filip to any side to have a goodly crowd watching them for their first match in a foreign country. It is quite possible that they will have more people cheering for them tonight than any other touring club team has had in this country throughout football history.

Two more matches—at Manchester and Leeds—will complete the tour and we hope that the support they receive in those two cities will be as great as it has been in London.

How far it refers to other cities in England we do not know but football in London owes a lot to the support of London's Jews. They are a great sport-supporting fraternity and are, as far as Arsenal is concerned, very loyal in their regular patronage of the club.

For these people, today it is a red-letter day. For them it must be one of the spectacles they have looked forward to for many, many years. Who will blame them if their loyalties are not with Arsenal tonight!

Apart from the Boxers v. Jockeys match in floodlight on our ground last April and a few odd friendly matches and junior games around the country played in artificial light, very much on an experimental basis, tonight can be considered to be the first large-scale match of its kind in England. The equipment has been considerably improved since last April and we think the conditions should be just about as perfect as can be obtained with present knowledge of lighting. Even so there may be lessons to be learnt tonight for future reference.

It is obvious that in such an important competition as the Football League, permission will not yet be granted for matches to be played in floodlight on a "general approval" basis until many more grounds have been equipped with floodlight apparatus. Not every club has the scope nor the financial means to instal such apparatus.

In many ways we were lucky. The basis of our lighting had already been installed before the war, on a meagre foundation, for the purpose of evening training and it required little work to bring these up to the required standard. However, considerable additions have had to be made plus a lot of internal work in the way of cable laying and switch-gear installation in order to bring the whole scheme up to the standard you will see tonight.

This work has been carried out by our own staff and great credit is due to our Clerk of Works—Mr. George Elliott—and our electrician—Mr. Ron Franklin—for their perseverance and hard work.

It would seem that floodlighting, where installed on grounds up to a certain standard which could be laid down, would be a means of easing the situation of congested League fixtures, especially at the end of the season, before evening daylight matches are possible and where the result of the match would not affect relegation or promotion. This latter condition would be a necessary provision in the early stages otherwise a contention might be put forward that one team was not acclimatised to the unusual conditions or vice versa, thus having some effect on the eventual result.

Apart from the usefulness from a fixture-congestion point of view it would obviously be acceptable from a public standpoint rather than having matches played mid-week in the afternoon or a surfeit of evening matches in daylight in the closing days of the season, when football is bound to suffer, as an entertainment, owing to the strain on the players.

In any event, we do not advocate floodlight football all the season through because obviously, the cold winter evenings would not lend themselves to late kick-offs. A crisp winter afternoon somehow seems to personify football in Britain, but not so a cold evening under artificial light.

Tonight's match will cast a shadow, the length and importance of which few of us here can forecast. In the annals of Arsenal, and we venture to think, Hapoel Tel Aviv—it will be recorded as an important milestone.

We used to be told that to see the world it was best to join the Navy. Today, it seems, this can be accomplished by becoming an International class footballer. Alex Forbes, who came here in 1948, has played football in Brazil, Luxemburg, Germany, Belgium, Portugal, Switzerland, Spain, Austria, and the Home Countries. He has in all, eleven full caps for Scotland.

Alex Forbes

hockey and the beginning of football. A friend invited him to turn out in a game of football for Dundee North End, and the rest of the story is well known.

One of Alex's many tales concerning his football is a match he played for Sheffield United against Chelsea. It was Tommy Walker's first game for the London club and Alex reminded him of an occasion they had met previously when Hearts came to Dundee. Alex this time, was not quite on the field but nearly so—he was ball boy.

Alex is single, though applications with a view to marriage are not invited. As a golfer he describes himself as no worse than the rest of them—at snooker—above average. At tennis—fair. When we consider his ability at ice hockey it would not seem rash to describe him as an all-round sportsman. This does not run in the family. Alex has four brothers—only the youngest has shown any sporting aspirations. Having had a trial for a Senior Scottish club he was unlucky enough to break a leg,

THOUGH there may be many footballers who have alternative sports—we have a number of them at Highbury—few, if any, have achieved anything in the field of ice hockey. Alex is the exception, and there was a time when it looked as if ice hockey would be his foremost sport.

It is remarkable that he did not take up serious football until he was seventeen, and yet, when only nineteen, he figured in the Scots International side against England at Wembley. It was all a matter of chance that he switched to football.

Having played as a defence-man for Dundee Tiger Cubs he graduated to the senior club at the age of sixteen. Then he was chosen for a Scottish select side. This was virtually the end of ice from which he is now recovering.

Alex was originally a forward. Sheffield United one day were short of a half and he was moved back. The match was against Everton who included Joe Mercer in their team.

Alex has a Cup Winners medal for Arsenal, helping to beat Liverpool at Wembley in 1950. And he very nearly has a League Winners medal too. His came to Highbury towards the end of the 1947-48 season. We had fourteen matches left to play, exactly the number of appearances required by any player to qualify for a League Winners medal if his club finish at the top. Alex played in thirteen. The match he missed was a holiday game at Blackpool when Tom Whittaker thought it unwise to risk him in these holiday games so close after an appendicitis operation. Had he played, a medal would have been his.

Question: Who is the best inside-forward you have had to mark?

Answer: Raich Carter.

THE ANFIELD STORY

Wednesday, 12th September, 1951. Kick off 6 p.m.

LIVERPOOL TEAM: Ashcroft; Jones, Parr; Taylor, Hughes, Paisley; Payne, Baron, Stabbin, Williams, K. B., Liddell.

ARSENAL TEAM: Swindin; Barnes, Smith, L.; Forbes, Daniel, Mercer; Milton, Logie, Holton, Lishman, Cox.

REFEREE: Mr. B. J. Flanagan (Sheffield).

RESULT: Liverpool 0, Arsenal 0.

On the whole this was a game where a draw was probably the fairest of results for both sides deserved to score, both defences played magnificently and both attacks always looked dangerous.

Early in the game Jimmy Logie headed past the post when everything looked lost for Liverpool and later in the game we got the ball into the home net but the effort was ruled off-side by Mr. Flanagan. Liverpool's defence, with Hughes holding lively Holton, showed up well with Parr perhaps the outstanding player.

Arsenal's defence too, looked particularly solid but even so the thrustfulness of Liddell led to several dangerous incidents which might have easily led to goals for the home team if he had had to contend with a less able opponent than Walsey Barnes. Even apart from that George Swindin probably had to deal with more balls from Liddell than from all the other home forwards put together.

Arthur Milton, playing at outside-right in his first League appearance this season impressed with his ball-play and "snap," which constantly kept Parr on his toes. With a less tenacious defence Milton might have got several shots home despite a number of off-side awards against him early in the game.

The general summing up of this game was that Arsenal might have snatched a victory and Liverpool were, no doubt, happy at the end of the game to have one point to add to their tally.
